Amref Health Africa is the largest African-led health development organization. Founded and headquartered in Kenya, we work with the most vulnerable African communities through our country offices in Ethiopia, Kenya, South Sudan, Tanzania and Uganda, and regional hubs based in Southern and West Africa. Through our laboratory, clinical outreach and training programs, Amref Health Africa reaches an additional 30 plus African countries. In 2015 alone we helped more than nine million people and trained over 115,000 health workers, many through online and mobile learning platforms that enabled health workers to upgrade their skills without leaving their jobs so they could continue to serve their communities. With more than half a century of experience delivering health care and improving health systems in Africa, we support those at the heart of communities, particularly women and children, to bring about lasting health change.

MISSION
To improve the health of people in Africa by partnering with and empowering communities and strengthening health systems.

VISION
Lasting health change in Africa.

INTRODUCING
Dr. Githinji Gitahi, Group Chief Executive Officer

We are pleased to welcome Dr. Gitahi as the new Group CEO at our headquarters in Nairobi, Kenya. Until his appointment at Amref Health Africa in June 2015, Dr. Gitahi was Vice President and Regional Director for Africa of Smile Train International, where he successfully established partnerships for long-term sustainability with various African governments. Prior to that he worked with the Nation Media Group, where he was Managing Director for Monitor Publications in Uganda as well as General Manager for Marketing and Circulation in East Africa. Dr. Gitahi also held progressively senior positions at GlaxoSmithKline, Avenue Group, and began his career as a medical doctor specializing in Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Dr. Gitahi has a Bachelor’s degree in Medicine and Surgery and a Masters in Business Administration.
DEAR FRIENDS

The Ebola epidemic in West Africa in 2015 clearly demonstrated the need for robust health systems in African countries. It shone a spotlight on the need for our ongoing work building stronger, effective health systems—training health workers, improving laboratory systems, creating access to health services for vulnerable populations, and promoting positive health practices at the community level. We’re proud that our community approach of involving local leaders in the Ebola response in Guinea resulted in a significant reduction in the spread of the virus.

We’re also determined to help alleviate drought conditions in Ethiopia, said to be one of the worst in the last 50 years. Our on-the-ground teams are working within communities, training health workers in matters related to drought and food shortages, including screening children for malnutrition, rehabilitating water supply points and closely monitoring pregnant women.

This past year Amref Health Africa in the USA secured additional funding to support our critical programs. Through a Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) grant in South Sudan, we’re developing quality, country-wide laboratory and blood transfusion services. We’re working in Tanzania to bolster their ability to stave off epidemics to increase global health security. With funding from United States Agency for International Development (USAID), we’re also partnering to improve the accessibility, availability, acceptability, and quality of the health workforce needed to achieve improved health outcomes and advance universal health coverage across Africa.

Our new Group CEO, Dr. Githinji Gitahi reinforced our focus on maternal health during a US visit in September by renewing our commitment to the United Nation’s initiative, Every Woman Every Child, where we pledged to train 15,000 more midwives in Africa, with more than 7,000 trained to date. Dr. Gitahi also spoke at the Clinton Global Initiative about our innovative mobile health platform, HELP, which allows us to train thousands more community health workers via basic cell phones.

Improving maternal health also drove Team Amref Health Africa’s participation in the 2015 TCS New York City Marathon as an official charity partner, running alongside past and current Kenyan champions such as Wilson Kipsang and Mary Keitany. Although Bob had a great time running through the streets of New York City with 12 other Amref Health Africa supporters, he’ll happily let the new participants take over this year. Please join us in the 2016 race when our 15-strong team will once again be running to train more midwives in Africa.

We could not continue our life saving and life altering work without the generosity of our donors, partners, foundations, friends, Board and staff. We are so grateful for your continued engagement. Your contributions mean the world to us in helping achieve lasting health change in Africa.

Fighting Ebola in Guinea One Community at a Time

More than 11,000 people lost their lives in the Ebola epidemic in West Africa last year. Working in Guinea, Amref Health Africa’s Ebola response team selected and trained trusted leaders from women’s, youth and faith-based organizations, (38 in total plus 50 religious leaders) to communicate with community members about Ebola prevention and management. With support from the Paul G. Allen Ebola Program, we trained local leaders to conduct home visits, identify suspected cases of Ebola and refer them to treatment. We also distributed 5,000 sanitation kits, helped modify risky behaviors, and held ongoing round table discussions to share information with community members.

Developing Africa’s Health Care Leaders

In 2015, the Management Development Institute (MDI) celebrated 10 years of contributing to better health outcomes by shaping Africa’s next health leaders. Funded by Johnson & Johnson and in partnership with Amref Health Africa and several academic institutions, over 970 African health leaders from 32 countries have graduated from MDI since its inception in 2005. A leadership development program, MDI helps improve the management skills of African health facility directors in areas such as planning, finance and health economics.

Creating a Nationwide Laboratory System in South Sudan

Laboratory services are crucial for the control of infectious diseases, especially in the effective diagnosis and delivery of HIV/AIDS prevention, care and treatment services. The majority of people living in South Sudan do not have access to essential health services, let alone quality laboratory services. In partnership with the Ministry of Health of South Sudan and funded by CDC, Amref Health Africa will help build the capacity of laboratory and blood transfusion services across the country.

Leah Ntatu, 17, was one of the first girls in her village of Shompole, Kenya to celebrate her transition to womanhood through Amref Health Africa’s Alternative Rite of Passage program. Featuring all the pageantry of the traditional ceremony but without female genital cutting, it includes a three-day workshop on sexual and reproductive health and rights, HIV prevention, and the importance of staying in school. “Everyone treats me with respect, men and women. They are happy for me that I’m still in school, to continue learning.” More than 9,000 girls have graduated from the program since it began in 2008. (Photo: Director of Capacity Building, Dr. Peter Ngatia revisited our 2013 commitment to end female genital cutting at the Clinton Global Initiative with Chelsea Clinton, NY, Feb. 2016.)

Frank

Frank Filbert, 25, has been working as a nurse in Tanzania for the past year. Frank upgraded his skills through an Amref Health Africa training program delivered on his mobile phone. “Last week a woman came in bleeding after recently giving birth. I tried as much as I could to help that mother. Finally I used my phone to see if my mobile learning materials could help. I actually managed to save her life thanks to my mobile training.”

Salématou

Fifty-year-old Salématou Soumah’s role in her local women’s organization in a small village in Forécariah, Guinea, was to wash the bodies of deceased women in her community. One day, without giving Salématou any more information, government workers told her to stop that practice because of the threat of Ebola. But Salématou, like many others in her village, did not even believe that Ebola existed and continued to wash the deceased. “It was only after the Ebola training I received from Amref Health Africa that I fully understood the dangerous risk I was taking. I realized I had to abandon this practice to protect myself and my family,” said Salématou. “Now I help create awareness about Ebola in my village.”

Team Amref Health Africa in the 2015 TCS New York City Marathon

Thirteen runners, including Executive Director, Bob Kelty, ran in the 2015 TCS New York City Marathon as part of Team Amref Health Africa. The team dedicated the 26.2 mile run to training more midwives in Africa and raised over $60,000. Kenyan marathoners, two-time winner Mary Keitany and 2014 titleholder Wilson Kipsang ran as well, championing our goal to improve maternal health in Africa.

International Day of the African Child

To celebrate the 2015 International Day of the African Child, Amref Health Africa held a festive cocktail party in New York to galvanize support for our programs and to attract younger donors. The event also served to recruit potential members of our new Young Professionals Board, a group that will advance Amref Health Africa’s mission by assisting with fundraising and visibility of the organization in the USA.

Allen & Overy

Last year marked the beginning of a two-year partnership with Allen & Overy, an international legal practice, whose global staff voted for Amref Health Africa as their charity of choice. The partnership resulted in a project that works closely with children’s groups, youth groups, and schools in remote, northern Tanzania to raise awareness of sexual and reproductive health and rights. The aim is to help lower the incidence of teen pregnancy so as to keep girls in school, as pregnant girls are routinely, and illegally, expelled. To date, the project has reached more than 50,000 young people.
Headquartered in Nairobi, Kenya, with seven offices around the continent, Amref Health Africa currently implements more than 160 programs and reached over nine million people with essential health services in 2015. Located in New York, Amref Health Africa in the USA provides financial and technical support to headquarters and raises the overall visibility of our brand in the US. We also advocate for greater and more strategic US government investment in frontline health workers in the developing world.

AWARDS
Amref Health Africa was presented with the 1999 Conrad N. Hilton Prize for alleviating human suffering and was recognized with the 2005 Gates Award for Global Health for extraordinary achievement in improving health.
STAND UP FOR AFRICAN MOTHERS

Aimed at training 15,000 midwives, Amref Health Africa launched the Stand Up for African Mothers global campaign to draw attention to the unacceptably high rates of maternal mortality in sub-Saharan Africa. Every day in 2015, 550 African women died in pregnancy and childbirth, mostly from preventable causes. By contributing to safe deliveries, trained midwives ensure that birth is a time of joy for African mothers. To date, we have trained more than 7,000 midwives across Africa. Midwives save lives!

RUN THE 2016 TCS NYC MARATHON WITH US

Join Team Amref Health Africa and run in the 2016 TCS New York City Marathon. Together we can end maternal mortality.
